[illegible] Inquiry [illegible] Arabs

[illegible] Palestine Arab Higher Committee told Great Britain in "the [illegible] ing to an ultimatum" that [illegible] Arabs will "proceed to organize [illegible] forces and prepare all [illegible] for defence in order to re[illegible] the national struggle" if [illegible] adopts the report of the [illegible]-American Inquiry Committee, an Arab official declared.

[illegible] said the phrase "national [illegible]" refers to the uprising [illegible]-'39, which ended when [illegible] adopted the White Paper [illegible] Jewish immigration into [illegible].

[illegible] Ibn Saud, one of the most [illegible] Arab leaders, branded [illegible] recent British-American inquiry commission report on Palestine a "betrayal", and urged the United States and Britain to "fulfill their promises" and reject its findings.

Ibn Saud said the immigration of 100,000 European Jews into Palestine would not settle the refugee question. He added that terrorism had been "eliminated all over Europe and the Jews can live peacefully there," helping the Allied occupation authorities with reconstruction.

"I cannot advise Arabs any longer to keep quiet," the Saudi Arabian King declared in an interview. "I have been doing my best to convince Arabs to work hand in hand with the Allies because I was certain justice would be done. But now we feel these recommendations are a betrayal."

The inquiry commission's report recommended immediate immigration of 100,000 Jews and urged that Palestine be neither a Jewish nor an Arab state.

[illegible] six-foot-four ruler, who [illegible] influence because of [illegible] as protector of the [illegible]

2. Recognition of the necessity [illegible] establishment of an independent Palestinian government.

3. Imposition of restrictions on Jewish purchase of lands.

4. Complete abolition of immigration.

"Unfortunately, the superficial recommendations of the committee upset these basic principles", he said. "This gives to the committee recommendations their erroneous and dangerous character.

Reports Bias On Increase

A rise in discrimination against Jews, including veterans of the war, was reported in the regular monthly bulletin of the National Community Relations Advisory Council following a survey of employment conditions in fifteen major industrial centres of the United States.

The Council noted that the lowest incidence of discrimination was found in New York, which has a State law against discriminatory employment practices, and remarked:

"Apart from any consideration of administration, therefore, it seems clear that the very existence of an FEPC statute has served as an effective deterrent to avert discrimination."

The report said that, while no discriminatory advertisements were published in newspapers in New York City, discriminatory religious specifications in newspaper help-wanted ads showed an increase in 195 per cent this year over last, despite a decline in the total volume of this type of advertising.

Secret Way Found, Hundreds Blocked

Jewish leaders at Trieste, Italy, admitted that British security police had successfully broken up an "underground railway" whereby European Jewish refugees were illegally migrating to Palestine by way of Yugoslavia.

A Jewish spokesman said the British field security service had intercepted 500 Jews who had [illegible]

The [illegible] them at the Jewish Community House in Trieste on April 12 and immediately placed a police guard on the house. They were confined to two rooms, a corridor and an open courtyard for ten days, and then transferred to the U.N.R.R.A. Camp, he said.

At about the same time the security service intercepted a train loaded with 200 Jews at the Yugoslav border town of Sezana. This group was confined to the train for six days and then sent to the U.N.R.R.A. camp.

The spokesman said the British discovered the secret route after the arrest and questioning of five Jewish leaders, but he added that "another system soon was operating."

Jewish Goods Not Restored In Austria

A strong protest against the recent anti-Semitic outbreaks at a football match in Vienna, was made at a Jewish meeting by Mr. David Brill, president of the Jewish Community Council, who said that these anti-Semitic excesses were taking place despite the fact that Vienna was still occupied by Allied forces. It was feared that the situation would become much more menacing after the occupation troops had left.

The Austrian Government, Mr. Brill stated, must be held responsible for the conditions prevailing in Vienna, as it had not taken any measures against anti-Semitism and had failed to restore to the Jews their property and apartments which had been taken by the Nazis. Chancellor Figl's announcement that all stolen property would be returned to the Jews was mere lip-service. In spite of the announced denazification large numbers of Nazis still held important positions in public services.

Nazi students in the University of Graz, the capital of Styria, staged a demonstration of protest over the recent dismissal of pro-Nazi professors, whose chairs have been occupied by Socialists and Liberals, amongst whom there are some Jews.

The University administration rejected the students' demand for the reinstatement of the Nazi professors. Lectures were boycotted, and it was only when the students were told that they must either attend the lectures or be excluded from the University that they called off the boycott.

The Jewish problem in Austria was discussed in the general press for the first time since the liberation of the country. An editorial in the independent newspaper Neues Osterreich, with which the President [illegible]

[illegible] future Austria [illegible] to offer to the Jews who had returned.

Deliberately, the article said, the view was taken that there was no Jewish problem in Austria. But there was no possibility of Jews and non-Jews living together under healthy conditions unless anti-Semitism was destroyed, it went on. If the seeds of anti-Semitism were to be weeded out, positive and un-

"La Spezia" Jews Go To Palestine At Last

"The Jews of La Spezia", whose case has produced hunger strikes, arrests of Jewish soldiers, threats of mass suicides and of intervention by influential persons in Palestine, Great Britain and the United States, sailed victoriously to Palestine with British permission, the Italian Palestine office announced.

Since April 4, when caught attempting to sail illicitly for Palestine, 1,014 of them, refugees from all over eastern and central Europe, have been huddled on their little 300-ton steamer.

Three Jewish sergeants of the British Royal Army Service Corps still are under arrest for arranging their transportation to La Spezia in British Army vehicles and with British Army rations.

The refugees went on a hunger strike, and Jewish leaders in Palestine went on a hunger strike on their behalf. Appeals were made on all sides, and the British Laborite leader, Prof. Harold Laski, promised them as a brother-Jew that he would do everything possible to aid them. Eventually visas for all were granted, though some were delayed because the April quota had been exhausted.

When permission for all to sail arrived the weather delayed their departure two more days. Then they left on two ships, [illegible] men, 413 women, and a baby, singing and weeping for joy.

Dr. [illegible], leader of the refugees, made a speech of thanks to [illegible] and British authorities. [illegible]

Brings Letters From Survivors

One hundred and eighty-five letters in a shoe box — some of them with messages as poignant as a cry from a tomb — were opened in a New York hotel room.

Penned in Yiddish, Polish and German, the letters were brought from a camp for displaced persons at Deggendorf, Germany. The writers were Jews who had somehow survived the Nazi extermination program. Addressed to relatives in New York, and in some cases containing the first inkling that the writer was still alive, the messages were delivered by the Joint Distribution Committee at the Broadway Central Hotel, 673 Broadway.

Miss Sonya Seidlin, of 12 East Ninety-seventh Street, a uniformed representative of the J.D.C., who returned after passing three months at the Deggendorf camp, handed out the messages. Showing the cheerfulness of the bearer of good tidings, Miss Seidlin also had a few words of personal greeting from each of the survivors to his relative. The recipients of the letters were joyous, or burst into sobs.

Given a letter addressed in a masculine hand, Lewis Grabow, of 374 East Twenty-ninth Street, a silk manufacturer, was puzzled. "Who this is I haven't got the slightest idea," he said.

When he had finished the letter, Mr. Grabow, who came to the U.S. forty years ago, was shaken. The writer was Adolf Grabischewski, a young cousin, who had gotten his New York relative's address from a member of the family who had escaped from Germany to Sweden. The youth reported that his parents had been cremated by the Germans.

Mr. Grabow said he and his brothers and sisters in the U.S. would raise money and try to bring [illegible]

Intercept 1,800 Illegal Newcomers

The largest single group of Jewish illegal immigrants, numbering 1,800, were intercepted aboard a 2,000-ton Rumanian vessel heading for Palestine from Rumania, a British naval patrol told Haifa authorities by wireless on May 13. British destroyers escorted the ship toward the Haifa harbor.

Rumors of the ship's arrival had been circulating for twenty-four hours and the British authorities in Haifa apparently knew about its movements since it entered the Aegean Sea from the Dardanelles before last week-end. But the authorities, according to one observer, preferred to let the vessel approach before pouncing.

The arrival of these 1,800 men, women and children will give the Palestine administration another problem of calculation on its monthly immigration quota of 1,500. Almost 400 certificates for the May 15-June 14 quota have been issued to refugees aboard the ships Fede and Fenice, which left La Spezia last week. Of these 1,014 refugees 679 received Palestine cer-

Jews Lose By Czech Law

Jewish relief agency officials in London have called attention to a situation in which they charge the Czech Government with discriminatory treatment of Jews in the Sudetenland who listed themselves as German nationals in the 1939 registration in Czechoslovakia.

A Czech law that has been rescinded by the present administration allowed this national minority registration. It did not leave these [illegible]

To the 2,000 or 3,000 Jewish survivors in the Sudetenland it has meant the loss of their Czech citizenship, their liability to expulsion

Hagana Warns Britain On Bases

The British Government was warned by the Hagana (Jewish resistance movement) that any transfer of military bases to Palestine from Egypt, Syria or Lebanon would be resisted unless Zionist aspirations were fulfilled. The warning was given in Hebrew, English and Arabic on the underground radio called the Voice of Israel and operated by the resistance movement.

The announcer, who fluently spoke all three languages, declared that Britain was embarking on a dangerous policy. Britain agreed to withdraw her land, sea and air forces from Syria, Lebanon and Egypt with the clear intention of transferring them to Palestine, he said.

"With this intention in view, Britain is interested in maintaining the mandate (over Palestine) at all costs and later in assuming a trusteeship of Palestine," the radio said. "But at the same time it is doing everything to evade its obligations to the Jewish people, who are the sole reason for the mandate or a trusteeship being assumed. Britain cannot play both ends off against the other. It cannot utilise the Jewish tragedy for the selfish ends of maintaining its mandatory rule here and evade the fulfilment of that mandate, which provides for a Zionist solution for the Jewish problem."

Asserting that the British Government was trying to wriggle out of even giving effect to the Anglo-American Committee's recommendations for immigration (of [illegible] 000 Jews this year) the [illegible] added that unless this were [illegible] diately acted on, the Jewish [illegible] ance movement would [illegible] ment to defeat the [illegible] [illegible]

In her farm home, seven miles from North Bay Ontario, Mrs. Huneault was [illegible]. Suddenly, she smelled smoke . . . smoke that quickly became flames sweeping through the frame house. Six of her children were in bed with measles . . . yet the mother, quickly and coolly, tackled the difficult job of getting the frightened youngsters outside.

Repeatedly she braved the flames and suffocating smoke. It was no easy task, for the children kept trying to follow her back into the blazing house. [illegible]

Reveillon In Paris

By Ida Treat, An American Writer In France, In The Nation

In a way we were all survivors. Even Jeanne's mother, home that day after five years' exile in a mountain village—a floor of beaten earth, water one hundred yards down the slope, and no one to chop wood for her. Eighty-two, and her joints swollen with rheumatism. "I have lost the habit of society," she said. There was André, back from six years' fighting on the sea; Pierre, on leave from the Rhineland after two years in the maquis, a Gestapo prison, and the campaigns of Alsace and the Danube. There was Charles, Jeanne's husband, whose prisons had all been in France; Jeanne, who had toiled in the underground month after month; our Martha, who was cooking the dinner. And there was the girl from Auschwitz.

For all of us it was our first Réveillon in Paris since 1939. Jeanne warned us, it would not be a feast. The chicken promised from the country had not arrived; the family meat ration would have to stretch for seven. There would be vegetable soup, a salad, and she had made an apple tart. And she was afraid dinner would be late—she had had to take her weekly page to the printer's and she had been late getting back.

We sat in a circle about the sawdust-burning stove — the furnace had not been lighted for five years. Two bottles of red wine stood warming beside it. Through the open door the heat filtered into the dining-room. Out in the hallway the thermometer stood at freezing, and in the kitchen by the gas stove — Jeanne had tied an apron over her fur coat — it was only a degree or so higher. Condensed steam ran in rivulets down the walls and gathered in pools on the tiled floor. Poor Jeanne, we said, and pulled our chairs closer to the fire.

"Go easy with that," Charles warned, as a Directoire armchair creaked and wobbled. "It's the last of three to survive the occupation. Those delicate old things haven't much resistance."

Someone remarked — apropos of "resistance" — that certain words had become so associated in our minds with one distinct theme that they sounded almost startling when used in any other connection. "Like 'collaboration.' Could you imagine asking anyone to 'collaborate'?"

Pierre said that reminded him of his amazement on reading a notice in a taxi in pre-war Berlin: "Don't open the windows without permission of the Fuehrer." Even those of us who knew no German got that one. Mlle Kahn, the girl from Auschwitz, did not laugh; probably she hadn't listened. She looked up frowning. "It's like the word 'selection'."

Nobody spoke for a moment. We had all heard of the grim 'selections' in the death camps; we also knew what had happened to her parents and her sister.

Charles asked if she had received any news of her flat. What were the chances of her getting it back?

"Not very good. The man Vichy put there has four children. You can't put them into the street. And after all, what would I do with eight rooms?" It was her father's flat, she explained.

Even the bergère in which she sat looked much too big for her. She filled about one-third of it. Mlle Kahn was the only deportee I knew who had put on no weight to speak of since her return. I found myself looking at her hands — delicate artist hands, almost transparent. Of the four women

"THE SPECKLED TROUT"

Based upon a picture painted for Carling's by Shelley Logan

This is one of a series of illustrations on the subject of the Conservation of Canada's natural assets designed to emphasize the fact that the beauties of unspoiled nature that we enjoy today are a precious birthright which we must protect for tomorrow.

[illegible]

"A Beauty"

A swirl beneath the surface, a ripple where a moment before quiet water had mirrored the leaves above . . . And then—an explosion of iridescent beauty as the speckled trout leaps high in search of food.

Since the days of Izaak Walton the joys of angling have captured the hearts of many men, and we in Canada have been endowed with a stock of fighting fish unparalleled in the world. But by our very enthusiasm we have endangered the sport we love. Many waters which formerly teemed with fish are now barren. Many species have vanished entirely from their old haunts.

Our governments, both Provincial and Federal, have instituted restocking programmes, built fish hatcheries, and passed laws for the protection of game fish, but without wholehearted and active public support, mainly in the observance of daily catch limits, these measures will fail.

Conservation is not just a doctrine to be preached to hunters and fishermen. It is a vital part in the continuance of our national economy, and must, of necessity, fail if its measures do not receive the full support of all Canadian citizens.

PERFORM HEBREW OPERA IN NEW YORK

"Hechaluts," Palestinian folk opera in Hebrew, with music and book by Jacob Weinberg, was performed in concert version at Carnegie Hall, New York, in the sixth Festival of Jewish Arts presented by the Manhattan, Brooklyn and Bronx Zionist Clubs, with a cast of 150 persons. "Hechaluts" ("The Worker"), called in English "The Pioneers," had its world première at the old Mecca Temple, now the New York City Center, in November, 1934. It represents a series of episodes from Palestinian life. The central figure, instead of a single character, is a collective hero—a group of work people. A romance starts in the prologue in Poland, and the old pious generation of "Chassidim" is contrasted with the younger people's longing for Palestine. The music uses the idiom of the Diaspora, based on ancient Hebrew scales and traditional cantillation, and also the secular Hebrew-Arabian modes and rhythms.

Ludwig Lewisohn gave a brief address in the intermission on "The Dues of Jewish Culture." A capacity audience filled the hall.

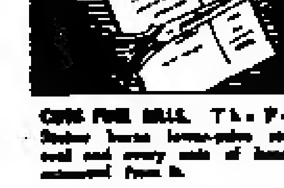

There is little Jewish knowledge among the Persian Jews, though many of them know Hebrew. The religious functionaries know little beyond the Five Books of Moses and the regulations covering the slaughter of animals and the rite of circumcision. Only recently there has been a renaissance of Jewish life, especially under the influence of Zionism. At Teheran, a "Society for the propagation of the Hebrew language" was founded which publishes Hebrew books and periodicals. Heretofore, Palestine had to furnish the Persian Jews with Hebrew literature.

"THAT'S A LOAD OFF MY MIND!"

Mrs. Mason's husband gets his pay in cash. Since he's working all day, his wife banks it for him, and she says she's always jittery 'til she gets it safely there. And her brother, who runs a store, says he worries too about the money from the cash register! Safeguarding your money is one of the prime services rendered by your bank.

What a relief it is when you have deposited your money in the bank! No more worry lest it should be lost or stolen! You need only keep a little ready cash in your pocket or in the house. Bills can be paid by cheque and your cancelled cheque is your receipt.

When the teller hands you your pass book, you glance at the balance and know to a cent how much money you have. You are so accustomed to your bank's accuracy that you seldom bother to check the figures.

The very fact that you—and some 5,000,000 others—take all these conveniences as a matter of course is a daily demonstration of your confidence in the dependability and efficiency of your bank.

she was the only one to wear new clothes. Given the Paris prices, her knitted suit and fur-lined shoes must have cost a fortune.

She seemed suddenly conscious of our concerned faces. "I can't help thinking what all this would have meant a year ago — to be warm and clean and among friends. I'm afraid I should have put it in just that order."

"I couldn't have endured the filth," said Jeanne from the doorway. "The only time I was arrested, they wouldn't let me take anything with me, not even a handkerchief. They said I would be home by night; they only wanted to ask me a few questions. You can imagine what I looked like when they let me out—after nine weeks at Fresnes."

I asked Mlle Kahn how long she had been at Auschwitz.

"Two years."

"It must have been a grand moment when the Russians came," said Charles.

Mlle Kahn nodded. "They gave us what food they could — salt pork and flour — and they brought us water. The battle was all around us. Most of us were too far gone for enthusiasm."

Jeanne's mother woke out of a doze to ask abruptly. "Was it a Russian who broke your wrist?"

We stared, and Mlle Kahn said patiently, "No, that was a fellow-prisoner, a Pole. You see, I was dipping up snow to make drinking-water for the children, and he wanted the pail."

"Speaking of the prisoners," Pierre began. But Jeanne's mother spoke again. Either she had not caught the reply or she had lost interest. Smiling a little childlishly, she looked from one face to the other and in the tone of a lady-in-her-salon asked: "Isn't anyone going to sing?"

Perhaps we needed that shock to sound the gulf separating this Réveillon, 1945, from the others. In other days Charles or a fellow-southerner would have given us a Gascon carol—a gay old thing, its Christmas theme embellished with allusions to forgotten controversies. Jeanne's mother or the soldier son would have replied with a carol from the Alsatian border, and Jeanne herself after much urging would have sung one of the old Protestant hymns of Franche Comté. It wasn't only the missing voices, or that the old intimacy was lacking, or that we all felt, unquestionably, older. The fact was there—after the years France and Europe had lived through, you didn't sing.

Disappointed in her hopes of music, the old lady dozed again by the fire while the talk surged on. Beyond a brief reference to the devalued franc and the return to the bread ration there was little talk of France. Or of personal problems in the immediate future, though they loomed big for most of us. Peace—the Moscow conference—America and Russia—world peace: it brought us back inevitably to the problem of Germany, the ghost that sits in permanence at every French hearth. How were we to lay that ghost?

Pierre, military governor of a small German city, said he wasn't over-optimistic. He felt convinced that the Russians too thought little could be done with the present generation of Germans, those from eighteen to fifty; that they based their policy on that belief and acted accordingly. "They don't waste their time sorting out the little sheep and goats. Every German today is an anti-Nazi if you take him at his word. I'm not sure the Russian method isn't the right one. On our side we back the church. Alles für Deutschland; Deutschland für Christus. There's still too much 'Deutschland' in all that, to my way of thinking. Over and over I tell them, 'You can't be a nation yet. You've got to learn all over, learn to live. Later on, we'll see.'"

"Still we have to count on someone. Who but the anti-Nazis?"

"Agreed," said Pierre. "I'm with you. We'll back the anti-Nazis. But here's a case in point — my chief of police. He offered all the guaranties: escaped from a K-L in '34; International Brigade in Spain; enlisted in the French army in '39; handed over to Nazis by Vichy. The right sort, indubitably the right sort. But from the day I made him chief of police, he changed. Changed overnight. A little authority, and there you were. The old Prussianism in all its glory. I had to replace him."

I asked the girl from Auschwitz, had she seen Martin-Chauffier's article about the behavior of German prisoners in the death camps? One heard so many stories. Were they as bad as all that?

"Some of them," she admitted. "Particularly the 'supervisors.' A German fellow-prisoner, a woman, had heaved rocks at her when the stones she was lifting slipped from her numbed fingers. (A long red scar showed through the meshes of her stocking.) But another German woman had saved her twice from the "selections" and had risked her life to do so—she wasn't a Jewess either. "You mustn't generalize. The records of all the nations in camp were just as mixed."

She leaned forward in her chair, her long hands clasped about her knees.

"Isn't the problem bigger than just Germany? So often at night when the camp was still — snow outside on the frozen marshes, and the chimneys of the crematory sending up great flames among the stars — I used to think, if this can happen here, or anywhere on this globe, isn't it a sign that something is wrong with all of us? Perhaps with man himself? I — I used to despair," she added in a low voice.

"It's worth while pondering," said Charles. He glanced at his watch and switched on the radio. A thin treble of children's voices came over the air. Il est né, le divin enfant. . . .

Mlle Kahn hitched her chair nearer.

"The children," she whispered. "When I hear that, I think—you know, generally they didn't use gas. They forced us to undress them—they forced women to do that. And, afterward, to wheel the go-carts to the storehouse. One hundred women, pushing the empty baby-carriages. And we didn't refuse; we wanted to live. Isn't that enough to brand us?"

As the carol ended, we heard the bells over Paris. They roused Jeanne's mother. She smiled sleepily.

"Peace on earth."

"To men of good-will — if and where we find them," Pierre completed. "Which doesn't mean we won't keep our eyes open. What about it, Mlle Kahn?"

"I'm afraid I'm a poor one to judge," murmured the girl from Auschwitz. While Jeanne called from the dining-room: "Minuit, Chrétiens! And the soup's on the table."

Bodies of 23 women, all believed to have been Jewish slave laborers shot by the Nazi SS, were found in a mass grave near Potsdam.

CLASS IN COOKERY

two pounds flank meat
six large potatoes
one onion
one pound pitted prunes
one cup water
one teaspoon salt
one large sweet potato
two tablespoons brown sugar

Peel potatoes, cut in slices. Add prunes. Cut onion very fine, add meat. Then add rest of potatoes and prunes on top, add water, sugar, salt, and cook in 350-degree oven for five hours.

Mrs. R. Sacks,
402 Palmerston Boulevard, Toronto.

CHERRY CAKE

one cup sugar
two cups pastry flour
two teaspoons baking powder
one small bottle of maraschino cherries three-quarters cup milk
two eggs, separated
one-quarter pound butter

Cream butter and sugar; add egg-yolks; then flour sifted with baking powder, alternately with the milk. Add the cherries, which have been cut up, then the cherry-juice. Beat egg-whites stiff, but not dry, and fold in at the last. Bake in a spring-form pan, for 30 to 35 minutes, in a 375-degree oven.

Cherry Icing:

Save out from the cherry-juice only enough to color and flavor the icing. Cream two-to-three tablespoons butter; add enough icing sugar until it is thick, and then mix in a small amount of cream, and the cherry-juice, to make it smooth, and spread on cake when cool.

THE PROVINCE OF PROMISE...

ONTARIO'S northern timber areas form a very important part of her natural wealth, and logging — getting the trees out for pulping — is a colourful operation which, while linked with progress, is still in step with nature. The processing of pulp into newsprint and a host of new and promised products is however an advanced industry upon which model towns are built and careers are launched. Ontario's forest wealth is side-kick to her mineral riches . . . more solid if less spectacular. Pulpwood and gold are each the yield of rugged country . . . each in its way beckons to the daring.

FOREST WEALTH

An estimated 71,051,000,000 cubic feet of timber stand on Ontario's 104,908,000 acres of forested land. With a capital investment of $250,000,000, the pulp-and-paper and lumber industries rank first in industrial financing. Forest industries also lead in number employed, salaries and wages paid and net value of products. Plans are afoot to: (a) train men in efficient logging methods; (b) maintain the yield of natural tree growth by reforestation and (c) modernize woods operations with mechanical equipment.

Commentaries

By Dr. Harry J. Stern, Rabbi

"God's House"

"How lovely are thy tabernacles,
O Lord of Hosts!
My soul yearneth, yea even pineth
For the Courts of the Lord:
My heart and my flesh sing for Joy unto the living God."
—Psalm 84.

Centuries have passed since the sweet singer in Israel uttered this inspiring sentiment. They have been centuries of change marked by evolution and revolution. But despite the atomic age, it is still true, as in the days of the ancient Psalmist, that men love the tabernacles of God and are willing to sacrifice of themselves for the advancement and enhancement of the courts of the Lord.

Why do men amidst the ebb and flow of the ages so significantly and profoundly continue in their love for synagogue and church? Simply because no other resort on earth has such enduring superiority as God's house. For the sanctuary is the one institution which symbolizes the noblest in life: from the altar-fires of God's house men can carry away kindled torches with which to illumine the path of life; here, too, through meditation and reflection he is moved closer to the Supreme Presence and finds motivation through worship for practical humanitarian service.

Where else if not in God's house can man truly overcome his loneliness? For here fellowship is at the highest. It is founded on the concept that we are all God's children and that in God's sight there is no recognition of rich or poor, caste or class. It is in God's house where the burdened with sorrow can best find courage and strength and where the joyous heart is sustained by inspiration and exaltation.

How tragic it is that so many, due to their worship of the God of pleasure, have become incapable of appreciating God's house! Refreshing as the golf-course may prove to the golfer, entertaining as the movie palaces, with their Hollywood ladies, may prove to the movie fan, these only express the lower chords [illegible] harp of the soul. The higher chords of reverence, duty, and [illegible] aspiration can be had through worship in God's tabernacle. [illegible] good is the beautiful, polished body if it is a spiritual [illegible]?

Through the genius of Israel there was created the tabernacle. "Let them make me a sanctuary that I may dwell among them" was an injunction that Israel devotedly kept. The portable sanctuary marched with our people through the desert wilderness. In it was contained the holy law. The Temple built by Solomon in Jerusalem finds its beginnings in the ancient tabernacle, and out of the Temple came the synagogue. The synagogue has been the mother of the church as well as the mosque.

For nearly 1900 years with the destruction of the Jewish national state, the synagogue has been our spiritual fortress and the bond of Israel's unity. It is today as in centuries past the primary institution of Jewish life. In recent years the synagogue has been somewhat neglected and many have given priority to the institutions of social service and philanthropy. This, alas, has been a serious error and has weakened Jewish life. For if we neglect the source-springs of Jewish life and culture, what enduring quality can there be to our community centers, our welfare funds, and our labors for a Jewish Palestine reconstituted into nationhood?

Surely in this frightful atomic power age man's place on earth and civilization are threatened unless the accent is now placed upon spiritual and ethical training which can only be had in the tabernacles of God.

Why, the question arises, are men and women of our day so negligent with God's house? Why do so many absent themselves from regular worship in Temple and church? Might it not be that because in synagogue and church, no matter how humble, man is ever reminded of his moral responsibility to God and fellow man? Invariably man seeks escape from the moral summons! Where else, in what other institution is the call to brotherly love and justice so eloquently and continually proclaimed?

Jews can render no greater service to Canadian life than by a whole-hearted return to the synagogue. The dynamic synagogue in this tragic hour of history can mother the hurt which we but recently experienced. At the same time it must proclaim anew the ancient ideals of Israel upon which hinges the democratic life and the very future of civilization. The ideals of the synagogue, freedom, brotherhood, peace and justice have indeed triumphed and the neo-barbarians, with their ferocious and inhuman teachings, have been trodden and smitten.

Judaism and more Judaism should be our answer to anti-Semitism. Positive Judaism, which expresses itself in the study of Torah, in Jewish discipline, in synagogue worship, these constitute our surest defense against all the storms and whirlwinds that may descend upon us.

Jewish youths may erroneously seek salvation in all sorts of "isms" but ultimately will feel sorrow for themselves because they were born within the Jewish fold. For true salvation and self-reverence will not be theirs unless they return to an acceptance of the privileges and responsibilities of Jewish synagogue life.

A return to the synagogue should spell for us a return to the classical meaning of aristocracy in Jewish life. Not he who only holds the purse will then be considered the prominent Jew but he who possesses knowledge of God and is of clean hand and pure heart.

We are living in an environment where [illegible] dedicated to the worship of God [illegible]. Why do not we, [illegible] [illegible] in our homes [illegible] in our synagogue and Temples? In lands of persecution we were forced to build our tabernacles on modest terms. This need not be in lands of freedom. Here we can fulfill the injunction truly: "Worship the Lord in the beauty of holiness."

Thank God for the multitudes who truly love the tabernacles of God in our day. These know the significance of God's house. They realize that without worship in the tabernacles of God life becomes but a desert and a wasteland and the human heart but an emptiness. Indeed, with the Psalmist we proclaim:

"For a day in Thy courts is better than a thousand;
I rather stand at the threshold of the house of my God
Than to dwell in tents of wickedness.
For the Lord is a sun and a shield;
The Lord giveth grace and glory;
No good thing will He withhold from them that Walketh uprightly."

Struck Villa Now Owned By Women's Mizrachi

By Rabbi L. Oschry, of Montreal, Executive Director, Mizrachi Organization of Canada

The Mizrachi Women's Organization of Canada has acquired title to the beautiful Struck Villa in Haifa. The Villa was designed and built for the late Professor Hermann Struck, an artist and etcher of international renown, and until his death in 1944 this estate was his home. In his will Professor Struck expressed the desire that his home be used as a Jewish religious institution, and not for private individuals. When this news was communicated to the Women's Mizrachi Organization of Canada, they immediately negotiated for the purchase of the Villa. The transfer of ownership was completed on May 1, and the campaign to raise the $60,000 purchase price, is now being conducted throughout Canada.

In the meantime work has been started to adapt the Villa to the needs of its new occupants. Young girls torn from their families, survivors of the nazi terror, will be given the chance to start anew in a warm atmosphere, supervised by people who are interested in their welfare and progress. They will be given instruction in Torah, in all the regular secular subjects, as well as in specialized fields such as dressmaking, nursing, home economics, teaching, farming, etc.

There will also be special social and educational services for new immigrants, and a nursery which will be able to accommodate about 100 children. All in all, about 350 girls will be housed in the Struck Villa, when the work is completed. No finer home could be found for the rehabilitation of our refugees. The house and studio stand on the slope of Mount Carmel, in the midst of tropical flower gardens, and look down upon the deep blue of the Mediterranean sea. To live there, according to Saul Raskin, would be to realize the dream of every artist—to live in the midst of exquisite beauty.

In every way the Villa is an expression of the unique personality of Professor Struck. Born in Berlin in 1876, he was brought up in a completely Orthodox atmosphere, and was at first expected to enter the Rabbinate. As his artistic talent became more apparent, he entered the Berlin Academy where he studied for five years. He subsequently journeyed through France, Italy, Belgium, England, Holland and America, finally settling in Eretz Israel. An etching of a rabbi, bought by the Berlin Museum, first brought his work to the attention of the public. He was subsequently admitted to membership in the London Royal Society of Painters and Etchers. Professor Struck's work have been in numberless museums and private collections. Long before his death he was recognized as one of the very greatest etchers of his day.

Two books publishd by him in Germany, Die Kunst des Radierens and Die Radierung Schonen Buche are rich in technical instruction, and were widely used in Germany. He has drawn portraits of leading figures such as, Heine, Hermann Cohen, Freud, Reinhardt, Warburg, and others. No better portrait of Herzl exists than the one he drew. But he excelled most in reproducing the faces of the ordinary, typical Jew. His longing for these types led him to journey through Lithuania, White Russia and Kurland.

His love for Jews and Eretz Israel was equalled only by his love for Torah. He never abandoned his study of Torah and he remained a deeply pious Talmud Chacham all through his life. He was one of the leaders of the World Mizrachi Organization.

In this home, the Struck Villa in this atmosphere of spiritual and physical beauty, piety and art, these Jewish girls will find the warmth and rest that will best help them to regain their balance.

JEWISH GOODS

compromising action must be taken by the State which must do justice to the great sufferings of the Jews.

Another problem, the editorial said, was indemnity for the enormous material losses suffered by the Jews. Nothing had yet been done in that direction. This affected all victims of political persecution, but the Jews were the worst off because the very few who survived had lost everything, property, jobs, and dwellings. About 60,000 dwellings were taken from the Jews. To-day, when 1,600 flats were needed to house the survivors, they could not be found, and many Jews were still living in most primitive conditions in public institutions, while many of their houses were still occupied by Nazis.

It was, therefore, not surprising, the article continued, that many Jews both there and abroad, were asking whether there was any possibility of living in Austria and that many wanted to emigrate. Such emigration would soon lead to the extinction of the Jewish population in Austria. Some Nazi-infected circles might welcome this, but to-day, the attitude of States and peoples to the Jewish question was the yardstick by which to measure their democratic rejuvenation and anti-Nazi attitude.

An Arab spokesman said that Arabs would regard the admission of 100,000 Jews to Palestine, as recommended by the Anglo-American inquiry report as an invasion to be combated in the same way that Great Britain prepared to battle German invaders in 1940.

Palestine Jews retorted that they were ready for any test.

REPORTS BIAS

It said further that 98 per cent more complaints of employment discrimination were filed with Jewish agencies in the six months following V-J Day than in the corresponding period a year ago. In New York such complaints declined 6 per cent.

Following are other findings of the council:

Of 241 private employment agencies, 89 per cent required applicants to state their religion and lineage, compared to a corresponding figure of 2 per cent in New York.

Of 1,251 Jewish job seekers, 60 per cent were asked their religion in interviews with one or more concerns, while in New York only 15 per cent were asked about their religion.

Of 851 veterans applying for jobs, 47 per cent were asked their religion. The corresponding figure in New York was 19 per cent.

Thirty-four per cent of all business concerns approached requested information about applicants' religion. The same figure for New York was 6 per cent.

Of the applicants covered by the survey, 15 per cent indicated they failed to get jobs solely because of their religion. This figure for New York was 7 per cent.

The report was based on surveys conducted in the following fifteen cities, which were said to include 80 per cent of the Jewish population of the United States: Baltimore, Boston, Chicago, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Detroit, Kansas City, Los Angeles, Milwaukee, Minneapolis, Newark, New York, Philadelphia, San Francisco, and St. Louis.

Orphans, Of Gassed Parents, Reach N.Y.

The slow torturous job of locating and rescuing the tens of thousands of European orphans whose parents disappeared into the yellow mist of German gas chambers was dramatically illustrated when seventeen Jewish refugee children straggled down the gangplank of the steamship Uruguay, docked at New York.

The group ranged in age from five to 24 years and the majority were less than 15. Dr. Nettie Sutro, a representative of the Swiss Committee for Refugees in Zurich, accompanied them.

According to a representative of the Hebrew Sheltering and Immigrant Aid Society, which brought the orphans to the U.S., some had fled from Nazi-occupied zones in Europe with their parents, only to be separated from them when the parents were returned later to Nazi jurisdiction.

Relatives of the immigrants and a delegation from the society met them at the pier. Dr. Sutro said that 100 more war orphans remained in Zurich awaiting passage to the U.S.

Rabbi Chaim Halberstam, 267 Stanton Street, met his two nieces, Debora, 18 years old, and Sima, 16, and two nephews, Uscher, 12, and Chaskel, six, none of whom he had seen previously. Their father, Rabbi Jacob Halberstam; their mother and five sisters and brothers had been killed in a Nazi pogrom in Bochnia, Poland.

The Uruguay's list included 150 repatriated American citizens. Most of the passengers were refugees and displaced persons.

Two of the orphans, a brother and sister, had an eight-year history of fleeing, hiding, hunger, concentration camps and shelters. The Hebrew Sheltering and Immigrant Aid Society, which arranged for the children to come to relatives or friends in the U.S., had been searching Europe for these two children for four years. A stack of a hundred cables, letters and interview carbons traced the children from the time they fled Germany, one an infant in the arms of its mother, until they arrived in New York.

There is nothing exceptional about the case of Berthe and Leon Dreyfus. She is eleven, he is eight. The files of the society are filled with hundreds of similar cases.

In 1938, [illegible] purge was in full cry. Wilhelm Dreyfus was a Jewish laborer, living in his own home in a small German village with his wife, Clara, and his daughter and infant son. It became unsafe for Mr. Dreyfus to keep his family there. They packed all the possessions they could carry and escaped across the border into France.

There was work for a short while. Then the refugee problem became too great, and the Dreyfuses were packed into a French refugee camp. Conditions were bad at their best and when the Germans spilled into France in 1940 the Dreyfuses were lucky. They escaped into the unoccupied zone.

Here the refugee camp life was worse because of the crowding. Mr. Dreyfus wrote to his sister-in-law, Mrs. Wilhelm Reutlinger, of 126 West Ninety-sixth Street, asking if she might bring the children to the United States where they would be safe. The Hebrew Sheltering and Immigrant Aid Society started making the necessary arrangements.

After sixteen months of constant negotiations by the society, all was ready to bring the entire family to the United States. The State Department had granted immigration visas, the transportation money, $1,551, was raised and all papers were in order.

While the Dreyfus family was awaiting transportation the Germans moved into the unoccupied area of France. Within a month word was received that the Dreyfus family had been shipped to the Polish extermination camps.

For more than three years nothing was heard from the family. Then word came that the children had escaped from the concentration camp the week they were to be sent to Poland. The father and mother did not escape. The children had been hidden by the underground and smuggled across the border into Switzerland. There they were located a year ago in a child refugee center.

The society set to work again. Now the children are with their aunt, reports the New York Herald Tribune.

When Czechoslovakia was liberated, Jewish officials said, confidential instructions were sent to the local authorities by central administration to treat Jews as Czechs or Slovaks, even if they had registered as German nationals in 1930. This policy was suddenly changed, it was said, and on Feb. 20 Vallaw Nosek, Communist Minister of the Interior, issued guidance as to how Czech officials should interpret the law about the confiscation of former enemy property. Confiscation is to be enforced, he is reported to have ruled, against anyone who has spoken German or gone to German schools.

As far as is known, it is not expected that the Palestine Government will order the newcomers away or arrange their repatriation to Rumania. They will undoubtedly be allowed to stay.

Secret preparations for their reception were made in the past few days by the Jewish underground organization handling illegal immigration. But, as the ship was too large to approach shallow inshore waters and landing people in small boats some miles offshore is risky because of the present freakish bad weather, the organizations were probably relieved that it was intercepted outside, [illegible] courtyard. He turned to his wife: "It is mama," he said.

Mr. Berliner, who fled the anti-Jewish restrictions of Breslau in 1936, said he had not seen his mother in nine years. Last June he came across her name in a German-language newspaper, the first he knew she had survived the terrors of the concentration camps. From her he learned that his father had starved in a camp and his brother had been shot. A sister had fled the Nazi terror to Manila, only to come to near-starvation as a prisoner of the Japanese.

From Miss Seidlin, Mr. Berliner learned the good news that his mother would soon be on her way to this country. He looked again at the snapshot. "She looks swell," he said.
